Integrated Comprehensive Unity Theory for Societal Transformation

"Unity Theory"

Preliminary Rough Draft

Why Unity Theory?

The impetus, (premiss) of this theory is based on the reality that there are currently numerous global crises including climate destabilization, species die-offs, overpopulation, economic destabilization, political gridlock, and the growing wealth gap, to name just a few.   Our old and current social systems are not adequately capable of solving these and other problems in the short time we have to do so, and we are continuously putting all future generations at risk, with a future in which their rights will be DRAMATICALLY reduced in relation to a generation ago. Individuals the world over are less and less able to meet their Basic Life Necessities, and Opportunities for Advancement are shrinking, as our economies increasingly support the 0.001%. Power seems to have been transferred to larger and larger institutions, with less and less local involvement or control. The primary old system solutions that are being given at this time are either based on fragmented single-focus social movements or slow / gridlocked government systems that are no longer representative of people the way they were intended to. There doesn't seem to be enough momentum in any individual fragmented issue to hold enough votes to solve any of these massive global crises. Even if a single focused issue is implemented, it still leaves dozens of other issues getting worse, and the implementation of that single issue can sometimes cause other problems that were not considered. This is why Unity Theory comes in, as we need a new way to address these issues that ensures that real long term solutions can be implemented that pre-plan for all accumulative effects of any individual solution. We are still very hopeful that we can work to solve all of our global crises, and the application of Unity Theory could be an integral part.

Basic Theory:

Our proposed theorem is that it may be impossible to implement substantial tangible change using the current model of fragmented single-focus social movements across the world, and therefore it may only be possible to solve any one of the global crises through unification of "ALL" the people and social movements.

To unite social movements of the world would be extremely difficult to say the least, but to unite all the people of the world is pretty much impossible within the current framework of our fragmented society. Therefore the foundation of our Unity Theory must consider how we as humans fundamentally perceive the world, and allow us to re-create our perspective and world view through conscious paradigm shifts at the individual level. Unity Theory gives the ability to allow multiple parallel systems of life styles that consist of different world views to live side by side without conflict or the need to impose your world view on others.

The application of this theory involves detailed processes, methods, and systems, with the goal of gathering data and evidence through experimentation, and eventually achieving validation and proof of the theory's applicability to individuals and society. Unity Theory is like a puzzle, with a whole variety of solutions that connect with each other based on precision based calculations, but the interactivity of the puzzle itself are based on simple everyday human conscious experience that are easy to engage in at any age or experience level.

We have no idea weather or not the Integrated Comprehensive Unity Theory for Social Transformation will work, but it is testable within experimental applications. The current fragmented social structures we currently use have not solved the global crises as they continue to get worse, so there is no reason to believe the old systems will suddenly solve all our problems. Therefore it is essential to present Unity Theory as a viable option to be considered with any other proposal for solving any particular global or regional crisis. In the end, that is all we are, a option on the table.

Example for Matrix to Gage Solutions:

In a national context, will you need at least 50 million people to get enough political votes to make any legal changes. If you have 10 movements each with 10 million people within them, it is a simple calculation, where you obviously need at least 5-6 movements to unite in order to achieve the political votes to get any single of the 5-6 issues accomplished by adding up the 50-60 million people needed to enact change. The application of Unity Theory is just basic math, for how you are able to enact all 5-6 issues on the agenda. Every solution can be put into a matrix of what resources, hours of work, or number of people are needed to accomplish the goal. The focus is on accumulating those resources, and preparing for the moment of implementation when the resources add up.

Example of Matrix to Gage Successful Implementation Benchmarks

One of the core benchmarks that must be documented are weather individuals have access to Basic Life Necessities and Opportunities for Advancement. These targets can easily be documented simply by asking people weather or not their basic needs are currently being met. If someone is homeless that is an obvious example of not having your Basic Life Needs (BLN) met. If someone can't find an opportunity which allows for advancement, obviously they do not have access to opportunities. Although there does need to be work on standardizing what Basic Life Necessities are we can already begin gathering data because we can already agree on many, including clean drinking water which many people across the world do not have access to. If there is a single person who is unable to have access to BLN, that means our system is not functioning sufficiently and we can easily measure the level of disfunction within a few % points. If the theory works we will see these numbers dramatically reduce. There are many more benchmarks and gages to calculate and track problems, but this give a few of the most important.

Application of Unity Theory for Societal Transformation

The Application of Unity Theory for Societal Transformation takes three forms. The Documentation of the Theory, where we are creating a book called The Comprehensive Plan. The Implementation of Unity Theory, which is the creation of a glocal organizing system called the Unity Network. And third, the background teaching and understanding of all interconnected Unity Theories, including details pertaining to our own version.

Documentation of Unity Theory within The Comprehensive Plan

The Documentation of Unity Theory as it is applied towards Societal Transformation takes place within a step by step guide for the transformation of society. We are in the process of creating an interactive Book entitled "The Comprehensive Plan", that anyone can participate in helping to create. The three primary components of the book are the Step by Step ideas and projects of the Comprehensive Plan itself, the Methodology of our entire systems and theories, and a fictional novel that shows what the plan could look like in action as a visual story that can be much easier for people to connect to.

Implementation of Unity Theory within the Unity Network

The most difficult part is to actually Implement The Comprehensive Plan, and other systems, programs, and methods of Unity Theory. The primary organizational network of this experimental implementation is the Unity Network. Unity Network is a multitude of ideas, projects, and organizations that constitute a variety of sub-experiments and interactive activities that anyone can contribute and get involved in. Overall, the entirety of implementing Unity Theory and The Comprehensive Plan consists of all aspects of the Unity Network, especially the core systems and processes. Currently Unity Network is in "Pre-Launch" mode and our goal is to raise at least $5,000 before a full launch occurs. It could take many years to get substantial data from our social experiments.

Background Education and Understanding of all interconnected Unity Theories

The Integrated Comprehensive Unity Theory for Societal Transformation is based on extensive scientific, sudo-scientific, spiritual and other bodies of work that have been on-going for centuries. By sharing the knowledge of Unity Theory that has been created over the centuries, our hope is that each and every one of us will re-think our own paradigm and perception of society and our reality within it, and to consider the rights of each individual to have their own world view. To really understand Unity Theory in its broadest context, it is essential to learn about and educate others on the basic principles and the variety of theories that allow us to expand and open our minds at the foundational root of our own perception of reality. Our theory includes showing that it is possible to hold onto your own world view and simultaneously allow for others to coexist in a lifestyle that includes their own and very separate world view, and empowers them within it. Minimally our goal is simply to educate and teach new ways of thinking about the world, universe, and our place in it.
